War Department Is Interested In Local Field CITY BELT LINE DECISION TONIGHT

CITY COUNCIL MEETS TONIGHT ON BELT LINE

Question of Disposition of Belt Line Franchise to be Decided
At Special Meet

HARBOR REPORT TO BE MADE

Matter of Construction of Additional Wharves Also to be Threshed Out

Whether or not the petition of M. F. Lewis for a franchise to construct a belt line from the Southern Pacific, railway and the Santa Fe railroad to the inner harbor, will be granted, will be threshed out tonight at a special meeting of the city council, the city planning commission and the board of directors of the Richmond Chamber of commerce, to be held in the city hall at 7:30.

Other matters pertaining to the development of the Richmond harbor will be taken up at the same time, and the harbor report of government engineers recently submitted to the Chamber of Commerce by engineers employed by the harbor will be taken up at the same time.

A special meeting of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce will be called today to make arrangements for the meeting tonight. It was announced by H. A.
Johnston, president of the chamber, who was at the meeting of the city council last night, Johnston also stated that the harbor report would be ready to submit to the council tonight.

CURRY URGES ACTION.
Action in setting the adjourned meeting for tonight was taken by the city council after a communication had been read from Congressman Charles F. Curry requesting quick action on harbor matters.

Curry's telegram read as follows:
"Please wire me immediately what has been done by the city of Richmond towards construction of wharf at east end of municipal wharf and small wharf at upper end of project at Elting Landing. What amount is city ready to turn over to War Department provided allotment is made by Department for completion of inner harbor project as authorized."

C. F. CURRY.
City Manager A. J. McVittie stated that he had replied to Congressman Curry's telegram in so far as he was able, stating that the city now has available the amount of $150,000 to be expended for harbor improvements.

What disposition will be made of the proposed wharves will also be decided at the meeting tonight.
Funds for the additional wharf of wharves were voted several years ago, it is stated, but no action toward this accomplishment has so far been taken.

MORE FUNDS SOUGHT.

Congressman Curry is battling for additional funds from the government to aid the Richmond harbor development, and to secure these appropriations he declares he must know what Richmond proposes to do in the matter. It is felt that a belt line to the inner harbor, where it is planned to locate the new wharves, is of paramount importance.
Several opinions were expressed at the council meeting last night to the effect that it would be preferable to have either the Southern

FACED PRISON PAROLE AND MARRIAGE INQUIRIES

Left to right are 18 year old Mrs.
Mary Seldow, "Jack" Seldow and his mother-in-law Mrs. Aida B. Woodson, of Washington, D. C., as they appeared in the chambers of Supreme Court Justice, Erlanger in New York City. After a two years' search, Mrs.

Woodson, who is prominent in Washington social and political circles, located her daughter in New York only to discover that Mary's husband was a paroled burglar and convicted assailant of a negro passenger on a trolley car he was operating. Seldow's police record stated he was married three years before he married Mary Woodson. Mrs. Woodson declared she would make every effort to have her son-in-law's record cleared and take him back with her daughter to Washington.

SHEPHERD MAY GET RELEASE FROM PRISON

(By Universal Service)

CHICAGO, March 23.—William N.
Shepherd may know by tomorrow night whether, during the weary weeks that must elapse before he is placed on trial on a charge of murdering his wealthy ward, William Nelson McVittie, he will be kept in a cell at the county jail or enjoy freedom on bail.

After the defense had put on the stand today principal witnesses by whom the State expects to prove the charge that Shepherd killed the youth, whose fortune he inherited by administering typhoid germs to him, the hearing of Shepherd's application for bail was continued until tomorrow by Judge H. Hopkins, chief justice of the Criminal Court.

At that time Shepherd's attorneys will argue that the evidence revealed by the State witness is not sufficient to show such overwhelming presumption of guilt that Shepherd should be kept in jail.
They will be arguing a seemingly lost cause, however. Even Shepherd himself was manifestly downcast as the witnesses, repeating their stories that he had come to them on a hunt for information on bacteria and particularly how typhoid germs might be administered without detection afterwards, stick to their guns under a bombardment of questions and refused to back in a single detail of their stories.

FIRE ASSISTANT NAMED

On the recommendation of Trustee Frank McDermott, the El Cerrito board of trustees last night appointed W. A. Hines as assistant fire chief.

Pacific or the Santa Fe railroad company, or both concerns, build the belt line for joint operation, then to have it constructed by private interest.

Competitive bids from practically ferred to the City Engineer Ed Hotzman, City Manager McVittie and Architect Narbett, to work up the most favorable bid and report their recommendations to the city council at their special meeting to-night.

COMPLAINT OF SEWER TROUBLE TO BE REMEDIED

(By Universal Service)

Complaint of a great deal of trouble with sewers at Sixteenth and Macdonald avenue was reported to the city council last night by Leo Persen, and the matter was referred to the city engineer and the City manager for rectification.
It was stated that a six inch pipe at that intersection was too small to carry off the waste water from the home laundry, causing the water to flush up through the manhole and flood the building on the southwest corner of the streets. It was recommended that a 10-inch sewer be installed.

City Engineer Hoffman stated that he had already interviewed the laundry management and they had agreed to change a 6-inch outlet to 4 inch pipe and install a by-pass at Sixteenth and Macdonald to take care of the overflow. This, it was stated, would prevent the flooding of the building and do away with the expensive laying of a 10-inch pipe line all the way to Eleventh street.

Work on constructing the by-pass will begin today, it was stated, and will connect with the 8-inch sewer pipe at Bissell avenue. With the reduced outlet at the laundry, it is believed this will answer the same purpose as a 10-inch sewer main.

Engineer Hoffman and Manager McVittie were instructed to see that the matter is taken care of at once.

GOVERNMENT IS WATCHING AIR LANDING FIELD

War Department at Washington D. C., Has Asked for Local Air Field Plans

AVIATORS PRAISE FIELD HERE

Government Fliers Recommend Additional Work on Completing Richmond Field

"You have one of the best air fields in the United States."

This, in brief, was the enthusiastic declaration of Captain Giffon and Lieut. B. M. Bates, government aviators, who tested out the Richmond field Sunday.

The men also stated that in leaving San Francisco and flying across the bay to Richmond, the encountered fog banks, sometimes as low as fifty feet, but when the reached the Richmond field the air was clear with no fog banks near.

"But you should complete the field to its fullest capacity."

This, also in brief, was the conclusion of the two aviators after their visit here Sunday.

SUGGESTIONS CARRIED OUT

Acting on the suggestions of Captain Giffon and the air committee of the local Chamber of Commerce is completing arrangements to place on the field regulation landing light with a wind vane and rudder, which will automatically show the wind direction and act as guide to landing planes.

The landing fee will take the place of the sock formerly planned as a wind indicator, and will fill the purpose of both the sock and a landing fee. It will be an innovation in airfield construction and equipment.

The field embraces approximately 77 acres, only about six acres of which have been leveled and completed for landing purposes. This provides only a limited space for a few machines, and both Giffon and Bates recommended that the entire field should be entirely leveled and finished.

Working on the recommendation of the government aviators, is the airfield committee of the chamber, composed of Golden Downing, A. L.
Paulsen and Tom Carlson.

GOVERNMENT INTERESTED

That the government is already interested in the local landing field is indicated by a request received by the Chamber of Commerce from Major W. G. Klamer, chief of air service, department of war, Washington, D. C., for a description of the location and condition of the field. All the geographical data pertaining to the field will be forwarded to the department, where it will be prepared in the form of diagrams, maps and descriptions, published in the government Aeronautical Bulletin and distributed to government fliers and air mail plane pilots.

For the present it will be shown as an emergency landing for mail planes and government planes.

The Richmond field is now being used by Captain Duke, who has a Faro machine stationed here for commercial purposes. Lieut. Sweeley of the Presidio, will arrive today with government moving pictures to be shown to the Lions club here, and almost every day other fliers are making use of the landing place.

Youth Is Injured When Parked Auto Hit By Passing Car

Donald McCoy, 18 years of age, and a resident of San Pablo, was badly bruised when his car, which was parked beside the road at the intersection near the pottery plant on the Giant highway, was struck by another car driven by Vic Suhr.
The accident occurred at 1 o'clock this morning.

McCoy stated that he and his companions were standing around his car when they noticed Suhr's machine coming down the highway from the direction of Giant, going at an excessive rate of speed and careening from one side of the road to the other. When McCoy saw the car coming he made a dash for his automobile to get it out of the way but was not in time and as a result his leg was badly bruised, but no bones broken.

The injured boy was taken to the Cottage hospital where he was treated for the injury. It is expected that he will be quite well within a few days.

Suhr was taken under arrest by Deputy Sheriff Smiley on a charge of reckless driving and was held in the Richmond city jail.

MARRIAGE LICENSE ISSUED

Harry Hansen, 22 of El Cerrito, and Katherine Teksen, 21 of Oakland were issued a marriage license in Oakland yesterday.

GIRL SLAYER COLLAPSES AS TRIAL BEGINS

Aside From One Incident Dorothy Ellingson Appears Disinterested in Trial

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Preens Herself, Pats Her Hair And Smooths Clothing For Best Appearance

BY LAWRENCE MONFORT

United News Staff Correspondent.
SAN FRANCISCO, March 23.—Hard-faced and showing little signs of nervous strain with one exception, Dorothy Ellingson went on trial Monday for the murder of her mother.

The jazz-baby defendant faintly while she was being led from court for a conference with one of her counsel, disinterestedly except for occasions when she thought of the morbid thing which packed the courtroom.

Then she preened herself, patted her hair, and smoothed the henna ensemble suit in which she was garbed.
The faint episode threw the court into disorder. The girl's attorneys rushed to her side, but Joseph Ellingson her father, was before them. She was carried to the chambers of Judge Harold Landrock, presiding in the case, but did not regain consciousness until physicians had worked on her several minutes.

COURT TAKES RECESS

In the meantime, court recessed until 1:30 p. m. and was continued by a short recess and back at the county jail was able to return to court.

Mention of the murder, and frequently as prospective jurors were quizzed by Attorney Alexander Monsieur, her counsel, and assistant district attorneys, apparently did not interest the jazz baby. Occasionally she played with a vanity case in her lap.

Just as unemotionally as she heard the first jury questioned declare her age would influence him in her favor, the jazz girl heard other prospective jurors declare that because she is accused of killing her mother, they would require less evidence to convict her than in an ordinary case of murder.

FATHER SHOWS EMOTION.

Of those grouped within the railing before the bar, Dorothy's father and her brother, Earl, alone displayed emotion. Earl patted his sister's hand while she was recovering from her faint. Her father, who appears highly overworked, rushed to her side and covered his daughter's face with frantic kisses.

Questions propounded to prospective talemen indicate that temporary insanity, based on "irresistible impulse" will be the chief keynote of the defense. Monsieur and his associates also are expected to ask for a verdict of manslaughter, paying the way for commitment of Dorothy to a sanitarium for the cure of her mind.

SIX JURORS PASSED

Six jurors had been passed temporarily when adjournment was taken until Tuesday morning.

Dorothy showed more interest when the first woman juror was called to the box than at any other time during the day. She eyed Taleswo-man May E. Goodberlet interestingly when the latter declared she felt

WHY I BELIEVE IN RICHMOND AND THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

BY MRS. H. W. BRYANT
M. A. Hays Co.

Every accomplishment of any note today is due to the combined efforts of an organization or group. With but few exceptions the one man organization has gone the same way that the crowned heads of Europe took following the recent war.

The day when one man can adequately handle the successful affairs of any organization is past. The head of any firm or organization must have assistants and those assistants must be interested as much as is the man who leads the organization.

The same situation holds true of a Chamber of Commerce. Every name on the membership list of that organization should mean an enthusiastic booster for Richmond and this community as a whole.

Every man living in Richmond is a stockholder and working for one of the most favored cities on the Pacific Coast which means the entire nation. We cannot expect to have progress and prosperity served to us on a silver platter, we must go after it.

The financial support and maintenance of a Chamber of Commerce is the first move. The next is to continue that support as long as we continue to live and do business in Richmond and last but not means least is our personal support.

There are many things to be done to make Richmond a bigger and better city. The Chamber has taken the initiative in a number of these matters, now it is up to the membership of which we are all an integral part to get behind the program and put it over.

THE MUCH ABUSED TARIFF

"The protective tariff is about the worst gold brick ever sold to farmers," declared Benjamin C. Marsh, Managing Director of the Farmers' National Council of Washington, D. C., in a recent address before the League for Industrial Democracy.

It is too bad that there is not a better general understanding of the American tariff schedule. Anyone who reads it over can see that practically everything the farmer buys for the operation of his farm is on the free list with no duty charged against it, while the principle things which the farmer raises are protected by reasonable customs duties. In other words, foreign products which the farmer must use, including breeding animals, all kinds of supplies, fertilizers, building materials, oils, farm machinery, etc., are duty-free practically everything he raises to sell is protected against unreasonable foreign competition.

The American tariff, whose chief beneficiaries are the American farmer and the American workman, is about the most misunderstood and least understood feature of our government. When it is discussed as a business and not a political issue, it will be removed from the realm of mystery. In the meantime it saves the American farmer and the American worker from impossible cheap labor foreign competition.

RESPONSIBILITY OF INSURANCE MANAGEMENT

Insurance has been personified as a never sleeping sentry guarding the business interests of the world.

Insurance is the best outstanding example of the inter-relationship of business because it is a factor in every business transaction whether we realize it or not.

In the state of Illinois alone, the total amount of money and property protected by all forms of insurance reaches the stupendous figure of sixteen billion dollars. That sum is almost a thousand times the total taxes distributed by the state in 1922 and forty times the value of all farm products in Illinois in 1922.

Insurance companies differ from all other agencies entrusted with the money of the people. Not only must the original capital on which to do business be provided, but in addition there must be a surplus to guarantee the payment of proper claims immediately.

From the very moment in which the contract is made, the company is responsible for the payment of the amount guaranteed, if anything happens to the property or life of the insured.

ELECTRICITY TO CHEAPEN BUILDING

Electricity is responsible, perhaps more than any other one thing, for improved methods of building construction, making easier the burden of our workers and decreasing costs of production.

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers and others interested predict that the din of the steel riveter on building girders may soon give way to the flame of the electric arc, and the steel skeleton of the future skyscraper may be a single, welded unit.

Decreased cost, greater strength and lighter materials are all factors in the welded building that will, it is said, bring about the adoption of the new method of erection. Steel parts will be cut to pattern, much as a tailor cuts the parts of a coat, but without the necessity for the precise accuracy needed when lines of rivet holes must be matched.

The cost of drilling thousands of rivet holes will be saved; the strength of an arc weld is equal to that of the parts welded, and a welded joint is impervious to water, oil or gas, while the expense of welding is said to be only three-fourths that of riveting.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL
Copyright 1925 by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate

Dressmakers Are Not Enthusiastic Over Sprawl of Manish Fashions. SOME of the dressmakers are a real peril stalking in the guise of the mannish costume for women. They prey devoutly for a return of frock styles, the sentimental fripperies of the age of Empress Eugenie, the extravagances of the Pompadour period, the bustles, ribbons and ruffles of the period of 1880. It doesn't matter which it is, so long as women are not further persuaded to solve their clothes problem by wearing things that are as nearly like those of husbands and brothers as present prejudices will allow.

Not long ago in London a well-known actress appeared at one of the dancing clubs after the play had in a little mannish suit, a coat skirt, tailored jacket and masculine white silk shirt. It was decidedly becoming and she turned as easily as she had been dressed in conventional evening attire. Other women have done the same. After all, why shouldn't they? If they want to go about at night we should they have to endure all the inconveniences of decollete, clinging or ballooning skirts, floral festoons, lace frills, etc? That seemed to be the argument.

But it is no secret that though the great dress makers of Paris have been making rocks and wraps of decidedly mannish tendency to suit their customers they are convinced that, save to meet with an existing demand on the part of customers, this is not good business. Women need more clothes when they wear the foolish feminine sort. So we were not much surprised to see the introduction of ruffles and jabots and frills in the spring clothes created by the influential French dressmakers.

Carefully supervised and fenced about, the mannish tendency in present-day fashion can really do no harm. Manish materials are chosen for suits and wraps even when given a feminine touch in trimming so we see sorts of English and Scotch textures in street costumes, but so long as feminine and masculine nature remains as it is, the vogue of mannish clothes will never be more than a passing phase of fashion.

WHERE IT STARTED

CARATS

The carat, the unit of weight of jewellers and goldsmiths, was originally the weight of one of the seeds of the Abyssinian corn tree. These seeds, being very small and almost exactly equal in size, were used by ancient workers in precious stones as their units of weight. When at last artificial weights were made the name was retained.

The custom of allowing members of the government to send letters free of postage in England in 1660, it was much abused; there is a

SALUCE FOR THE FISH

Parsley Sauce

MELT two tablespoons of butter in a saucepan, stir in three tablespoons of flour and cook for a few seconds. Add a cup of water in which fish has been boiled or plain water and stir until it simmers for a time and then add salt and pepper and a tablespoon of chopped parsley, but do not allow the parsley to cook.

Tartare Sauce

This is a favorite with fried fish. To make it mix a tablespoon of chopped sour cream, tinkle and a half teaspoon of finely chopped shallot or onion with a cup of mayonnaise.

Shrimp Sauce

Make a cup of white sauce of medium thickness. Add to this a half cup of cooked shrimps, a teaspoon of anchovy essence and a quarter teaspoon of lemon juice.

Sardine Sauce

This is made by making a sauce from a cup and a half of stock, a tablespoon and a half of butter and a half table spoon of flour. Bone, skin and chop three canned sardines. Season with a little lemon, salt, and pepper.

BARRE, SON OF KAZAN

James Oliver Curwood

A LOVE EPIC OF THE FAR NORTH

Copyright, 1917, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

"BARRE, SON OF KAZAN," a Vitaphone Picture, With Wolf, the War Dog, is an Adaptation of This Story

SYNOPSIS

McTaggart, the factor, had gone to the cabin of Pierrot, the trapper, attempted to head Nepeese to his wishes, and, on Pierrot's unexpected return, had shot him. Now, as he embraced the struggling girl, Barre, the dog, whom also he had shot and who was at first thought to be dead, rose, despite his wounds, and bowed his teeth in the factor's leg. Nepeese, pursued by McTaggart, ran from the house to a gorge and plunged into a fifty-foot abyss, to what looked like certain death.

CHAPTER XX I—Continued

It was not sentiment that made him dig Pierrot's grave close to the princess mother's under the tall spruce. It was not sentiment that made him dig the grave at all, but caution. He buried Pierrot decently. Then he poured Pierrot's stock of kerosene, where it would be most effective and touched a match to it. He stood in the edge of the forest until the cabin was a mass of flames. The snow was falling thickly. The freshly made grave was a white mound, and the trails were filling. For the physical things he had done there was no fear in Bush McTaggart's heart as he turned back toward Lac Bain. No one would ever look into the grave of Pierrot Du Quesne. And there was no one to betray him if such a miracle happened. But of one thing his black soul would never be able to free itself. Always he would see the pale, triumphant face of the Willow as she stood facing him in that moment of her glory when even as she was choosing death rather than him, he had cried to himself: "Ah! Is she not wonderful?"

As Bush McTaggart had forgotten Barre, so Barre had forgotten the Factor from Lac Bain. When "He stood in the edge of the forest until the cabin was a mass of flames."

McTaggart had run along the edge of the chasm, Barre had squatted himself in the foot-beaten plot of snow where Nepeese had last stood, his body stiffened and his forefeet braced as he looked down. He had seen her take the leap. Many times that summer he had followed her in her daring dives into the deep, quiet water of the pool. But this was a tremendous distance. She had never dived into a place like that. He could see the black heads of the rocks, appearing and disappearing in the swirling foam like the heads of monsters at play; the roar of the water filled him with dread; his eyes caught the swift rush of crumbled ice between the rock walls. And she had gone down there!

He had a great desire to follow her, to jump in, as he had always jumped in after her. She was surely down there, even though he could not see her. Probably she was playing among the rocks and hiding herself in the white froth and wondering why he didn't come. But he hesitated—hesitated with his head and neck over the abyss, his forefeet giving way a little in the snow. With an effort he dragged himself back and whined. He caught the fresh scent of McTaggart's moccasins in the snow, and the whine changed slowly into a long snarl. He looked over again. Still he could not see her. He barked—the short, sharp signal with which he always called her. There was no answer. Again and again he barked, and always there was nothing but the roar of the water that came back to him. Then for a few moments he stood back, silent and listening, his body shivering with the strange dread that was possessing him.

The snow was falling now, and McTaggart had returned to the cabin. After a little Barre followed in the trail he had made along the edge of the chasm, and wherever McTaggart had stopped to peer over, Barre paused also. For a space his hatred of the man was burned up in his desire to join the Willow, and he continued along the gorge until, a quarter of a mile beyond where the Factor had last looked into it, he came to the narrow trail down which he and Nepeese had many times adventured in quest of rock-violets. The twisting path that led down the face of the cliff was filled with snow now, but Barre cleared his way through it until at last he stood at the edge of the unfrozen torrent. Nepeese was not here. He whined, and barked again, but this time there was in his signal to her an uneasy repression, a whimpering note which told that he did not expect a reply. For five minutes after that he sat on his haunches in the snow, stolid as a rock. What it was that came down out of the dark mystery and tumult of the chasm to him, what spirit-whispers of nature that told him the truth, it is beyond the power of reason to explain. But he listened, and he looked; and his muscles twitched as the truth grew in him; and at last he raised his head slowly until his black muzzle pointed to the white storm in the sky, and out of his throat there went forth the quivering, long-drawn howl of the husky who mourns outside the tepee of a master who is newly dead.

On the trail, heading for Lac Bain, Bush McTaggart heard the cry and shivered.

It was the smell of smoke, thickening in the air until it stung his nostrils, that drew Barre at last away from the chasm and back to the cabin. There was not much left when he came to the clearing. Where the cabin had been was a red-hot, smouldering mass. For a long time he sat watching it, still waiting and still listening. He no longer felt the effect of the bullet that had stunned him, but his senses were undergoing another change now, as strange and unreal as their struggle against that darkness of near-death in the cabin. In a space that had not covered more than an hour the world had twisted itself grotesquely for Barre. That long ago the Willow was sitting before her little mirror, the cabin, talking to him and laughing in her happiness, while he lay in vast contentment on the floor. And now there was no cabin, no Nepeese, no Pierrot. Quietly he struggled to comprehend. It was some time before he moved from under the thick balsams, for already a deep and growing suspicion began to guide his movements. He did not go nearer to the smouldering mass of the cabin, but slinking low, made his way about the circle of the open to the dog-corral. This took him under the tall spruce. For a full minute he paused here, sniffing at the freshly made mound under its white mantle of snow. When he went on, he slunk still lower, and his ears were flat against his head.

The dog-corral was open and empty. McTaggart had seen to that. Again Barre squatted back on his haunches and sent forth the death-howl. This time it was for Pierrot. In it there was a different note from that of the howl he had sent forth from the chasm; it was positive, certain. In the chasm his cry had been tempered with doubt—a questioning hope, something that was so almost human that McTaggart had shivered on the trail. But Barre knew what lay in that freshly dug snow-covered grave. A scant three feet of earth could not hide its secret from him. There was death—definite and unequivocal. But for Nepeese he was still hoping and seeking.

Until noon he did not go far from the cabin, but only once did he actually approach and sniff about the black pile of steaming timbers. Again and again he circled the edge of the clearing, keeping just within the bush and timber, sniffing the air and listening. Twice he went back to the chasm. Late in the afternoon there came to him a sudden impulse that carried him swiftly through the forest. He did not run openly now; caution, suspicion, and fear had roused in him afresh the instincts of the wolf. With his ears flattened against the side of his head, his tail drooping until the tip of it dragged the snow and his back sagging in the curious, evasive gait of the wolf, he scarcely made himself distinguishable from the shadows of the spruce and balsams.

On the afternoon of this day the second big impulse came to him. It was not reason, and neither was it instinct alone. It was the struggle halfway between, the brute mind fighting at its best with the mystery of an intangible thing—something that could not be seen by the eye or heard by the ear. Nepeese was not in the cabin because there was no cabin. She was not at the tepee. He could find no trace of her in the chasm. She was not with Pierrot under the big spruce.

Therefore, unreasonable but sure, he began to follow the old trap line into the north and west.

XXXI—IN FAIRYLAND

NOBODY who has not spent some time on an island in tropical seas can realize how beautiful such a place can be. Bill Ewing's island, and in the Bahamas was marvellous. All sorts of rare plants grew in the garden, which covered nearly all the island. The sea was streaked with vivid blue and green, so that when we went swimming we seemed to be bathing in pure color, instead of in just water.

Everything about the place was perfect. Never had I seen such a beautifully managed household. The servants were perfect. The maid who was assigned to me was a treasure; she could do everything, from arranging my hair to telling fortunes!

She told mine the first day we were at the island, when I was dressing for dinner. Dusk had fallen, swiftly as it does in the tropics, and I was sitting at my dressing-table, looking out of the window into the garden, as she brushed my hair.

She laid down the brush, and handed me a pack of cards. "Shuffle them, missy, and cut into three piles with your left hand," she said. I was amused, but interested. I've always loved to have my fortune told.

She sat down on the floor and spread the cards out around her. "There's a man far, far away who thinks of you," she began. That didn't surprise me especially; it was quite possible that she had heard about Jim, from Nathalie's maid, who had come down from New York with her. "He's writing to you now," she went on, "but it isn't a letter; it's a message that comes quick through the air. And it doesn't come straight to you."

"And there's love, love you'll say 'no' to, and then say 'yes,'" she went on. "And it brings you happiness, and it brings you pain. And I see a woman—"

Just then Nathalie rapped on the door, and came in. She frowned when she saw what Cissy, the maid, was doing.

"Black magic, Nancy?" she asked. "Better not bother with it. Her tone was pleasant enough, but there was an expression in her eyes that sent Cissy scrambling to pick up the cards, and begin to brush my hair again.

Bill Ewing laughed when I spoke to him about Cissy's fortune-telling at dinner.

"The servants have a lot of faith in her," he said. "She claims to be the seventh daughter of a seventh daughter, and she's hit on two or three rather important things before they happened, so of course they believe whatever she says now.

"Don't let her read the cards for you again, Nancy," Nathalie urged. "She can't tell you anything, and it's foolish to let her try. You'll be believing her, the first thing you know."

I wondered why Nathalie was so insistent; she was leaning toward me, across the table, her face so serious that I knew she was sincere in what she said.

I had no opportunity that evening to talk with her alone, but the next morning I came out to the terrace where she was waiting for her husband, who was going to take her out in a motor boat.

I brought up the subject at once. She flushed, and looked away from me.

"Before I was married, a woman read the cards for me," she said, finally. "And she told me that if I married Dick, I'd be the happiest woman in the world for a time, and then the most miserable. She said that I'd decide to leave him, and then everything would be straightened out again, and I'd be happy for a time, but that some terrible thing would happen, and bring me

She flushed and looked away from me.

both joy and sorrow. And—well, enough of her prophecy has come true so that I'm afraid to think of the rest of it.

"It frightens me, and spoils even happiness, when I remember it. So that's why I urge you not to let Cissy tell you anything; you'll believe her in spite of yourself."

"Oh, I won't believe her, truly," I laughed. "I've had my fortune told loads of times, and it never comes true. Why, a woman told me I'd be happy with Jim—and see how things have turned out! He's on the other side of the world, devoting himself to Mrs. Eaton, and I've here, not at all sure that I'll ever see him again, and not caring much whether I ever do or not!"

"Well, take my advice, and don't let Cissy try to read the future for you," Nathalie answered. Her husband came down the terrace just then, and she turned to him, her face so radiant that I could have killed Dick Jordan for ever making her unhappy.

They went down to the boat-landing and I stood there watching them. Would I ever be so happy as she was, I asked myself.

I turned to see Bill Ewing standing beside me. And my heart answered my question.

OHIO "DRY" OFFICIALS INDICTED BY FEDERAL GRAND JURY IN LIQUOR SCANDAL THAT HAS AROUSED STATE

TELEPHONE IS DETERRENT TO LAW BREAKERS

"The telephone has done more to aid in the capture of criminals and in the elimination of crime in this state than any other device ever invented," was the testimony given by Superintendent Robert T. Hurley of the Connecticut state police.

In an interview with a representative of the Connecticut Committee on Public Service Information, Superintendent Hurley explained that the cities and towns throughout the state and the precincts in the individual cities are linked so closely together by the telephone system that almost every policeman in the state can be put on watch, without delay, for fleeing criminals. He also pointed out the fact that the telephone is one of the most successful deterrents of crime, in that offenders realize how slim are the chances of escaping the meshwork of the telephone net.

There is telephone equipment in every police station and in every central headquarters in the state, so that communication with any section they may desire to reach. The operators employed at the police switchboard are men who have been specially trained so as to be quick to grasp the meaning of hurried calls and peculiar situations and how to interpret incoherent and vague messages and act coolly.

Costly Town Built To Be Destroyed By Flood in Film Scene

Destruction of a whole town by a torrential river forms one of the striking sequences in "On the Banks of the Wabash," a J. Stuart Blackton production, which will be seen at the Wesley M. E. church on Friday evening. This is one of the most costly sets ever erected for the sole purpose of destroying it during the taking of scenes.

The building of the village and furnishing of the houses cost a tremendous sum, according to those in charge of the production for Vitagraph. The town of Canberry Corners, built for the picture, was an exact replica of a town in Indiana and was constructed in Manhasset Bay, Long Island, where the flood scenes were taken.

J. Stuart Blackton, who produced the picture, took advantage of the tides in filming these remarkable flood scenes in "On the Banks of the Wabash." The town was built while the tide was low. The flood scenes were taken as the water rapidly rose eight feet when the tide came in.

"On the Banks of the Wabash" is based upon the immortal song of the same name by Paul Dresser. Its cast of all star players included Mary Carr, James Morrison, Burr McIntosh, Madge Evans, Lumsden Hare and Mary MacLaren.

The way to solve the Cross Word Puzzle is to fill in the white squares of the diagram with the words which agree with the accompanying definitions. The definitions are numbered to correspond with the numbers on the diagram.

Any word defined in the text under "HORIZONTAL" will begin at its number, shown on the diagram, and will extend all the way across to the first black space to the right of that number. That is, the word must begin in the square that contains its identifying number, and extend as far as the white squares continue uninterruptedly.

Any word defined under "VERTICAL" will also begin in the white space that contains its number, but will extend downward as far as the white space remain uninterruptedly.

"BILL" TURNER IS EMPLOYED BY J. P. STROM

J. P. Strom, has engaged the services of Jay Turner, an expert on Hudson and Essex cars. Jay Turner is known to the automobile track as "Wild Bill Turner" having acquired this nickname by his daring and wonderful feats while engaged in breaking records on the track.

Turner has the distinction of having driven the first Hudson car ever entered in a race, when he drove a Hudson in 24 hour endurance race at Seattle in 1909, during the Alaska-Yukon exposition held in that city.

Turner started his career in the automobile industry in 1899 and during the past 26 years he has been active in every department from the furnace to the selling end of the game.

For seven years Turner has been doing contest driving in which he enjoys an enviable reputation and is known by every prominent driver and automobile manufacturer.

Turner will have charge of the selling over the rapidly growing territory now allotted to Strom.

In knowing an automobile from the ground up Turner has no equal and he will personally supervise all servicing of Hudson and Essex cars bought from J. P. Strom.

Turner will make his home in Richmond and extends a cordial invitation to the Richmond motorists to call and get acquainted.

His advice pertaining to automobiles will be extremely valuable to all who seek it.

If you want your little dinner parties to be complete you must have some of the new place-card holders. There are charming little painted iron robbins and wee bunnies with little slits in the standards so that the cards may be placed just behind the small animal.

"This Woman" At The California

Irene Rich is scoring another success in "This Woman," the feature of the California Theatre for the last time tonight. She has the sympathy of the spectators throughout the performance and succeeds in living up to her reputation of portraying with exceptional skill sincere womanly roles. Miss Rich has more than talent. She has a rare personality that immediately wins her audience. The character of Carol Drayton, which Howard Rogers created in his novel "This Woman," has become even more sympathetic through Miss Rich's portrayal on the screen.

There are other outstanding players in the cast, including Ricardo Cortez, Louise Fazenda and Marc McDermott, all of whom are convincing in their respective roles.

The story deals with a music student, Carol Drayton, who finds herself in New York alone and discouraged. She is saved from suicide by Rose, a girl of the streets, who gives her her first meal in days. There is a raid at the restaurant and Carol is compelled to serve a term in prison. Then comes her fight to live down her jail record. Some wealthy people finally become interested in her singing and conceive a strange business plan. She is incorporated, the dividends to be paid out of her subsequent earnings. Then comes the difficulty of telling her friends about her unfortunate past, and finally her discovery that her music teacher is her best friend and really loves her. The plot has some unusual incidents, well handled, and there is enough newness in it to make it extremely interesting. At no place in the sequence of scenes does the picture lapse into dullness.

San Pablo Pirates Form Ball League

The San Pablo Pirates, under H. A. Kern leader, met last night at the San Pablo Baptist church where two members were initiated into the club. These were Eddie Fray and Charles Regan.

A baseball team was organized with Anthony Mortez as captain and this team will be entered in the Y. M. C. A. Notch Baseball League. The team has fine prospects of repeating its last years feat of winning the league. The boys have purchased new equipment and are practicing daily at the San Pablo Ball Park.

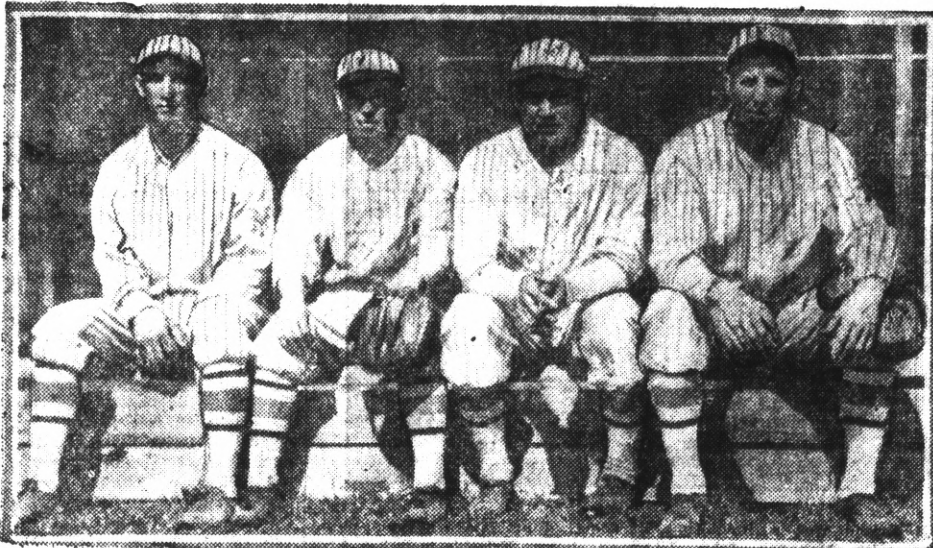

Fifteen boys were present last night with Carl Pinto, chief hunter, and Jimmie Day, ranger, presiding. Refreshments were served after the meeting.

APPLICATION REJECTED

Application of V. Carmagnola for permission to construct a business house on South Thirty-sixth street, near San Pablo avenue, was rejected by the city council last night on the unfavorable recommendation of the city planning committee of the city council. ## Live 2 Days in 1

Just add a sparkle to your morning glass of water.

You can be twice as happy. Your days can be twice as fit. And by a simple, pleasant method. Drink a glass of water, hot or cold, on rising. That washes out the stomach and fits it for food.

Add to that water a little Jad Salts. That makes an acid, effervescent drink. Jad Salts are made from the acids of grape and lemon, combined with lithia.

Conditions will change in one hour. The poisons will be eliminated. Good cheer will displace bluesness. Fitness supplant dullness. Whoever enjoys this experience once will court it whenever needed.

Try this tomorrow. Mark what a difference in your day. Every druggist keeps Jad Salts on call for millions now employ them.

MEMORIAL HALL TO BE OPENED IN TWO WEEKS

In view of present indications and report of the members of the building committee and hall directors, the Memorial hall of Richmond War Veterans in Twelfth street, fronting on Memorial park, will be ready for acceptance in two weeks.

Furnishings are now being purchased from the Central Furniture company by the supervisors and the building will be furnished with in the next two weeks. No late has been set for the opening as yet but announcement will be made as soon as a date of decision is reached.

Including furnishings, the building, with the lots it occupies, represents an investment of about $76,000. This amount includes $2000 appropriated by the Richmond city council from the old memorial fund of the city, which is to go toward furnishing the building.

A board of directors of the four veterans' organizations in Richmond is leasing the building for ten years at a nominal rental and the veterans will maintain the building. J. H. Fitzpatrick is chairman of the hall directors and Ralph Wood is secretary and custodian of the building, while W. A. Vickery is chairman of the building committee. Architect James T. Naffett drafted the plans and George and Owsley, San Francisco, contractors, constructed the building.

Besides using the hall for affairs of the war veterans bodies and their auxiliaries, the lodge rooms will be rented to other organizations and the auditorium will be rented for various functions. In this manner it is hoped to raise enough funds to maintain the building.

The formal opening will be marked by a public reception, at which the public will be the guests of the veterans.

The annual encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of California and Nevada, next June will be one of the first large events held in the new hall.

BOY INJURED IN AUTO CRASH IS IMPROVING

Roy Conyers, 19-year-old boy, who was seriously injured in an automobile crash near the pottery plant on the Central highway on Sunday, was reported to be considerably better last night. He had completely regained consciousness and was expected to recover from the basal fracture of the skull and other injuries sustained in the accident.

Conyers, who resides at 477 Lucas avenue, was riding in an Essex car with four other companions near the pottery plant when the automobile overturned at the intersection. Conyers was unconscious for many hours after the mishap, but the other occupants of the car miraculously escaped with slight scratches when the machine turned completely over, throwing them into the road.

Frank Booth, of 512 Third street, who was driving the car was the only other occupant that required medical attention. The two injured men were rushed to the Emergency hospital for first aid treatment. Conyers was later removed to the Cottage hospital, where he is at present, and Booth was allowed to go home.

The police state that Booth was traveling at a high rate of speed and as the driver turned off the road at the intersection, to avoid a collision with another machine, the car turned upside down when it struck the soft dirt.

GIRL SLAYER

no sympathy for Dorothy, either because of her sex or age, but that she could give a fair and impartial verdict if accepted as a juror.
Dorothy has declared against women on the jury.
"I believe men are more likely to understand by case," she told reporters. Also, I would rather have old men than young men on the jury, because I think they are more sympathetic with people in trouble. They've gone the pace, the old ones, and know what trouble is."

She mourned the "friends" of the hectic jazz-life, which led to the slaying of her mother.
"FRIENDS" ARE ABSENT
"Not one has been to see me in the two months I have been in jail," she said. "Just my father and brother and lawyers. Some of the boys might have stuck by me, and the girls too."

She rubbed a bump on her head, received when she fainted, her head struck a table.
None of her friends appeared in court. A small group of slick-haired youth, who tried to gain admittance, were turned away by a bailiff. None of them were identified as among her familiars in dance halls and chop suey palaces, where Dorothy danced and drank.
